

Question: Is there a difference in market value between occupied and vacant housing units?

Answer: The difference in market value between occupied and vacant housing units is statistically significant only in 2005 and 2011. In both of these years, the average market value of occupied housing units is higher or equal to the market value of vacant housing units.

Graphs:

